

This book is a work of fiction. Names, characters, businesses, organizations, places, events, and incidents either are the product of the author's imagination or are used fictitiously. Any resemblance to actual persons, living or dead, events or locales is entirely coincidental.

Copyright © 2011 by Night Circus, LLC

All rights reserved. Published in the United States by Doubleday, a division of Random House, Inc., New York.

www.doubleday.com

DOUBLEDAY and the portrayal of an anchor with a dolphin are registered trademarks of Random House, Inc.

Jacket design by John Fontana

Jacket illustration by Helen Musselwhite

LIBRARY OF CONGRESS CATALOGING-IN-PUBLICATION DATA
Morgenstern, Erin.

The night circus : a novel / by Erin Morgenstern. — 1st ed.

p. cm.

1. Magicians—Fiction. 2. Circus—Fiction. 3. Games—Fiction.

4. Circus performers—Fiction. I. Title.

PS3613.O74875N54 2010

813?.6—dc22

2010050546

eISBN: 978-0-385-53464-2

v3.1

Contents

Cover

Title Page

Copyright

Anticipation

OceanofPDF.com

Part I: Primordium

Unexpected Post: New York, February 1873

A Gentlemen's Wager: London, October 1873
Shades of Grey: London, January 1874
Magic Lessons: 1875–1880
Le Bateleur: London, May–June 1884
False Pretenses: July–November 1884
Target Practice: London, December 1884
Darkness and Stars
Truth or Dare: Concord, Massachusetts, September 1897
Associates and Conspirators: London, February 1885
Condolences: New York, March 1885
The Contortionist's Tattoo: London, September 1885
Horology: Munich, 1885
Auditory: London, April 1886
Stratagem: London, April 1886
Fire and Light
Hidden Things: Concord, Massachusetts, October 1902

OceanofPDF.com

Part II: Illumination

Opening Night I: Inception: London, October 13 and 14, 1886

Opening Night II: Sparks: London, October 13 and 14, 1886

Opening Night III: Smoke and Mirrors: London, October 13 and 14, 1886

The Hanged Man

Oneiromancy: Concord, Massachusetts, October 1902

Rules of the Game: 1887–1889

Tasting: Lyon, September 1889

Chaperoned: Cairo, November 1890

Wishes and Desires: Paris, May 1891

Atmosphere: London, September 1891

Rêveurs: 1891–1892

Collaborations: September–December 1893

The Ticking of the Clock: Vienna, January 1894

The Magician's Umbrella: Prague, March 1894

Reflections and Distortions

Cartomancy: Concord, Massachusetts, October 1902

The Wizard in the Tree: Barcelona, November 1894

Temporary Places: London, April 1895

Movement: Munich, April 1895

In Loving Memory of Tara Burgess: Glasgow, April 1895

Labyrinth

Ailuromancy: Concord, Massachusetts, October 1902

Tête-à-Tête: London, August 1896

Part III: Intersections

The Lovers

Thirteen: London, Friday, October 13, 1899

Bedtime Stories: Concord, Massachusetts, October 1902

Bookkeeping: London, March 1900

Three Cups of Tea with Lainie Burgess: London, Basel, and Constantinople, 1900

Stormy Seas: Dublin, June 1901

An Entreaty: Concord, Massachusetts, October 30, 1902

Invitation: London, October 30, 1901

Intersections I: The Drop of a Hat: London, October 31–November 1, 1901

Darkest Before the Dawn: Concord, Massachusetts, October 31, 1902

Intersections II: Scarlet Furies and Red Destinies: London, October 31–November 1, 1901

The Pool of Tears

Farewell: Concord, Massachusetts, October 30 and 31, 1902

Retrospect: London, November 1, 1901

Beautiful Pain: London, November 1, 1901

Part IV: Incendiary

Technicalities: London, November 1, 1901

Playing with Fire

Tsukiko: En Route from London to Munich, November 1, 1901

Escapement: Concord and Boston, October 31, 1902

Impasse: Montréal, August 1902

Visitations: September 1902

Charming but Deadly

Precognition: En Route from Boston to New York, October 31, 1902

Pursuit: En Route from Boston to New York, November 1, 1902

Old Ghosts: London, October 31, 1902

Aftermath: New York, November 1, 1902

Incendiary: New York, October 31, 1902

Transmutation: New York, November 1, 1902

Suspended: New York, November 1, 1902

The Second Lighting of the Bonfire: New York, November 1, 1902

OceanofPDF.com

Part V: Divination

Fates Foretold

Blueprints: London, December 1902

Stories: Paris, January 1903

Bons Rêves

Acknowledgments

The circus arrives without warning.

No announcements precede it, no paper notices on downtown posts and billboards, no mentions or advertisements in local newspapers. It is simply there, when yesterday it was not.

The towering tents are striped in white and black, no golds and crimsons to be seen. No color at all, save for the neighboring trees and the grass of the surrounding fields. Black-and-white stripes on grey sky; countless tents of varying shapes and sizes, with an elaborate wrought-iron fence encasing them in a colorless world. Even what little ground is visible from outside is black or white, painted or powdered, or treated with some other circus trick.

But it is not open for business. Not just yet.

Within hours everyone in town has heard about it. By afternoon the news has spread several towns over. Word of mouth is a more effective method of advertisement than typeset words and exclamation points on paper pamphlets or posters. It is impressive and unusual news, the sudden appearance of a mysterious circus. People marvel at the staggering height of the tallest tents. They stare at the clock that sits just inside the gates that no one can properly describe.

And the black sign painted in white letters that hangs upon the gates, the one that reads:

Opens at Nightfall

Closes at Dawn

“What kind of circus is only open at night?” people ask. No one has a proper answer, yet as dusk approaches there is a substantial crowd of spectators gathering outside the gates.

You are amongst them, of course. Your curiosity got the better of you, as curiosity is wont to do. You stand in the fading light, the scarf around your neck pulled up against the chilly evening breeze, waiting to see for yourself exactly what kind of circus only opens once the sun sets.

The ticket booth clearly visible behind the gates is closed and barred. The tents are still, save for when they ripple ever so slightly in the wind. The only movement within the circus is the clock that ticks by the passing minutes, if such a wonder of sculpture can even be called a clock.

The circus looks abandoned and empty. But you think perhaps you can smell caramel wafting through the evening breeze, beneath the crisp scent of the autumn leaves. A subtle sweetness at the edges of the cold.

The sun disappears completely beyond the horizon, and the remaining luminosity shifts from dusk to twilight. The people around you are growing restless from waiting, a sea of shuffling feet, murmuring about abandoning the endeavor in search of someplace warmer to pass the evening. You yourself are debating departing when it happens.

First, there is a popping sound. It is barely audible over the wind and conversation. A soft noise like a kettle about to boil for tea. Then comes the light.

All over the tents, small lights begin to flicker, as though the entirety of the circus is covered in particularly bright fireflies. The waiting crowd quiets as it watches this display of illumination. Someone near you gasps. A small child claps his hands with glee at the sight.

When the tents are all aglow, sparkling against the night sky, the sign appears.

Stretched across the top of the gates, hidden in curls of iron, more firefly-like lights flicker to life. They pop as they brighten, some accompanied by a shower of glowing white sparks and a bit of smoke. The people nearest to the gates take a few steps back.

At first, it is only a random pattern of lights. But as more of them ignite, it becomes clear that they are aligned in scripted letters. First a C is distinguishable, followed by more letters. A q, oddly, and several e's. When the final bulb pops alight, and the smoke and sparks dissipate, it is finally legible, this elaborate incandescent sign. Leaning to your left to gain a better view, you can see that it reads:

Le Cirque des Rêves

Some in the crowd smile knowingly, while others frown and look questioningly at their neighbors. A child near you tugs on her mother's sleeve, begging to know what it says.

"The Circus of Dreams," comes the reply. The girl smiles delightedly.

Then the iron gates shudder and unlock, seemingly by their own volition. They swing outward, inviting the crowd inside.

Now the circus is open.

Now you may enter.

OceanofPDF.com

Part I

PRIMORDIUM

The whole of Le Cirque des Rêves is formed by series of circles. Perhaps it is a tribute to the origin of the word “circus,” deriving from the Greek kirkos meaning circle, or ring. There are many such nods to the phenomenon of the circus in a historical sense, though it is hardly a traditional circus. Rather than a single tent with rings enclosed within, this circus contains clusters of tents like pyramids, some large and others quite small. They are set within circular paths, contained within a circular fence. Looping and continuous.

—FRIEDRICK THIESSEN, 1892

A dreamer is one who can only find his way by moonlight, and his punishment is that he sees the dawn before the rest of the world.

—OSCAR WILDE, 1888

Unexpected Post

NEW YORK, FEBRUARY 1873

The man billed as Prospero the Enchanter receives a fair amount of correspondence via the theater office, but this is the first envelope addressed to him that contains a suicide note, and it is also the first to arrive carefully pinned to the coat of a five-year-old girl.

The lawyer who escorts her to the theater refuses to explain despite the manager’s protestations, abandoning her as quickly as he can with no more than a shrug and the tip of a hat.

The theater manager does not need to read the envelope to know who the girl is for. The bright eyes peering out from under a cloud of unruly brown curls are smaller, wider versions of the magician’s own.

He takes her by the hand, her small fingers hanging limp within his. She refuses to remove her coat despite the warmth of the theater, giving only an adamant shake of her head when he asks her why.

The manager takes the girl to his office, not knowing what else to do with her. She sits quietly on an uncomfortable chair beneath a line of framed posters advertising past productions, surrounded by boxes of tickets